MERCY: DOWNTOWN MINNEAPOLIS' MOST PLEASANT HAPPY HOUR

By Mecca Bos

Now that Nicollet Mall is out of commission for the foreseeable future, where are you supposed to get your all-important post-work buzz and bite?

If you're shuttering yourself inside a dank bar during these dreamy days of early summer, you're doing it all wrong. But, you say, downtown is fairly devoid of good, quiet, outdoor space where they also happen to serve cheap drinks and truly great food!

Have you tried Mercy?

Mercy, formerly Marin, formerly D'Amico, formerly Jean George... Don't let the revolving door of concepts scare you away. The capricious restaurant space in the Chambers hotel has had all sorts of trouble keeping an anchor. But now that Mercy is in place, you should know a few things:

① It's a great spot to put on your post- or pre-theater circuit. If you're looking for a burger or a steak, they got that. If you're looking for something more inventive, they got that, too. Try crab empanadas with sweet chili sauce or a truly divine hot pastrami sandwich in a town with very few good pastramis.

② The gorgeous enclosed patio is a strangely underused part of downtown that feels like one part Vegas cabana, one part fancy courtyard, and all parts private hotel patio, except it's not—it's completely open to the public.

③ This is where you ought to be happy houring, now that the weather is cooperating and it's time for cool drinks in cool spaces. The very agreeable 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. time frame (as well as 9 p.m. to close) is generous enough, but wait 'til you see the prices:

They've got four dollar beer and wine. And this is no swill but instead things like Fulton, Bent Paddle, and Insight on tap and truly drinkable Sauvignon Blanc, Pinot Noir, and even sparkling. It's not that sick bottle of oaky Chard that nobody wants anyway.

Then, check out $6 cocktails, designed for the sweet summertime drinker in mind, but not so sweet that your teeth crumble and fall out of your head. The Strawberry Cosmo on tap has lime and house-made orange liqueur to offset the candy sweet of macerated strawberries. Or try the dill Caipirinha, where very subtle dill edges the traditional lime and sugar back to savory territory. Six bucks!

But woman cannot live on Aquavit and Ketel Citron alone, so that's why there are snacks. Inventive, good snacks.

The list is short but mighty, so start with the Pacu Fish Ribs, which sound strange, but are just like upgraded buffalo chicken wings. Tender slivers of whitefish get the Frank's Red Hot treatment you love, but with a more elegant twist. Pick one up and slide the flesh off the bone with your teeth "like an artichoke," as we were helpfully instructed to do.

Or get a generous bowl of shrimp and octopus ceviche, augmented with rich avocado. Housemade crackers provide your edible spoon. The Old School Cheeseburger is a nod to Burger King with "special sauce" and LTO. It's like a generous gift to the post-work eater for $10.

For too long, downtown has been slipping in the realm of great eating and drinking; much of what's truly good (Butcher and the Boar, 112, Bar La Grassa) is on the fringes. There are even slimmer pickings for really good drinking options at a really good price. There are even fewer with oasis-like surrounds.

Check out Mercy for all of these good, pleasant things, all in one pleasant place.

CATCH A PEEK AT TATTERSALL DISTILLING'S NEW SUMMER DRINKS MENU

By Mecca Bos

Situated behind Diamonds Coffee Shoppe off of Central Avenue, Tattersall Distilling is one part steampunk one part Kenwood manse.

Gauzy curtains and a grand twinkling chandelier offset the steely masculinity of the custom Vendome distilling equipment, works of art unto themselves. A plaid (Tattersall plaid, naturally) couch allows you to kick back with a cocktail among it all.

Tattersall operates as restaurant for cocktails, which would sound pretentious if its ownership weren't so down-to-earth.

It's been my experience in this field that if the hospitality is on-point, the quality of the product will correlate, and vice versa. Tattersall proves that rule.

Dan Oskey is the hospitalitarian here (there's really no other way to describe him). You may have known and loved from behind the bar at Strip Club and Hola Arepa, two places where quality and hospitality come together in perfect unison. He and partner Jon Kreidler and their crew of thirty or so (who they hold in very high esteem) have experienced tremendous growth in the less than two years since they've been open. Countless prestigious industry awards have them striving for new heights, including five from the recent San Francisco World Spirits Competition, which is like the Oscars of the drinking world.

Right now is an ideal time to head over, because they have just rolled out their new summer menu. We got a little sneak peek, and when I ask barmen Bennett Johnson and Timothy Leary to comment on how they came up with the new menu, they defer. It was a team effort. So, we were forced to pick our own favorites, tough job though it was, and collect tasting notes on each. Here they are in order of preference. Happy drinking (pretty much a guarantee at Tattersall).

The advertisement features a central circular logo for ECOGARDEN SUPPLY with a stylized animal head and the text EST. 2004. Surrounding this are several product logos: roots organics, MARS HYDRO, GENERAL HYDROPONICS, Advanced Nutrients, The Original Fan-Fan L'authentique, HYDRO, KINDLED GROW LIGHT, CYCO (with LATINUM SERIES and www.cycflower.com), and HEAVY 16 (with PROFESSIONAL GRADE - ARTISAN QUALITY). At the bottom, contact information is displayed in black boxes with white text: 800 TRANSFER RD. SUITE 13, ST. PAUL MN, 651.647.1896, and ECOGARDENSUPPLY.COM.

● ● ● JUNGLE BOOK

Rum, hazelnut falernum, coffee bitter orange, pineapple, banana bitters

My favorite out of this whole lineup, the Jungle Book is like the one kid in class who you keep angling to sit next to because he's the funniest and the most charming and before you know it you're best friends. Not usually a rum drinker, this thing bewitched me because it is the very essence of Jamaica. If you've ever drunk rum in that country, your palate will be forever stamped with that sense memory. It's impossible to capture here with regular label bar swill. Oskey tells us that's because the best Caribbean rums are made with pure molasses, and, you guessed it, that's how Tattersall makes their rum, too. Next to all of the tropical fruits in this magical cup, paradise is but sips away.

● ● ● TORONTO

Bourbon, fernet, maple, aromatic bitters

One of the benefits of drinking at Tattersall is the smoothness of the product. The Toronto offers a strange but welcome pure-tasting fluidity I've rarely tasted in bourbons except in the finest Pappy Van Winkles. The maple in question was harvested from Johnson's Taylor's Falls family farm, a point of interest and purveyor of exceptional flavor.

● ● ● WEEKEND AT BERNIE'S

Toasted coconut aquavit, peach, lemon, hazelnut falernum, rooibos-lime cordial, black walnut bitters

Satisfying as cinnamon toast with more grownup ginger and coconut swapped out for the cinnamon, this buttery and lightly sweet mixture is pure adult candy. Tattersall is exceptionally proud of their aquavits (basically a clear spirit that's been infused) and they deserve to be. Toasted coconut? It works. A candied ginger garnish picks up where the liquor finishes off.

● ● ● GARDEN STATE

Snap pea-infused barreled gin, Americano, amaro, lemon, mint gomme, smoke tincture

If you don't think you want peas in your drink, think again. Made with another infusion, sweet springtime peas proffer a light sweetness, along with gomme, like a simple syrup but with the addition of a natural emulsifier that improves the smoothness. But highly herbal amaro and a back-end kick of smoke has the drink taking a fascinatingly bitter turn. So good.

● ● ● BAD HUNTER

Aquavit, carrot juice, ginger, lemon, salt, dill

I pressed Johnson to choose a favorite, and this was his. In spite of the brilliant color (which looks even more brilliant against his sweet turquoise hand jewelry) this is a relatively subtle drink, nicely savory for those of us who shun sugary stuff. Inspiration was taken from a restaurant by the same name in Chicago, which according to Johnson is the sort of vegetarian food that sneaks up on you because it's so good. Just like this drink.

● ● ● COBRA SIGH

Rum, admiral spice, egg white, lime, amaro, habanero bitters

Leary's pick for a headliner, the Cobra Sigh was the most understated recipe in this lineup in my opinion, in spite of the addition of habanero. He likes it because it's spirit forward, a little spicy with baking spice, and a little spicy with chile, but "doesn't totally bombard you." I can't help but draw a parallel between that sentiment and all of Tattersall, when Leary concluded with his thoughts on the whole enterprise:

"We're just regular people making really good drinks."

The new drinks menu is now available.

MINNESOTA'S ICONIC GUECK BEER IS COMING BACK AS A LIFESTYLE BRAND

By Jerard Fagerberg

Chances are the logo for Gluek Beer is embedded somewhere in your memory.

Maybe you grew up seeing its timeless script adjacent to the scoreboard at Metropolitan Stadium. Maybe you remember seeing a pinstriped cone-topped bottle in your dad's hand at a family cookout. Maybe you recall seeing headlines in 2010 when, after 153 years in production, the traditional German lager was taken off the market.

It's this nostalgia that lifelong Gluek's devotee Linda Rae Holcomb is hoping to tap into when she re-releases the classic beer brand to Minnesota this Memorial Day in honor of its 160th anniversary.

"Gluek is still alive in the hearts and minds of beer drinkers across the nation," Holcomb says. "So many people have a Gluek Beer story. For people who care about the history, I can take them there and back again. It's delightful."

Despite the fact that Gluek's Bar in Downtown still serves beer under the Gluek's name and exists as a shrine to the pre-Prohibition brand, Gluek Beer has not been commercially produced since Cold Spring Brewing Co. (now Third Street Brewhouse) retired the brand seven years ago. It was a sad and unfitting end for a beer that'd been slaking the thirst of Germanic-minded drinkers since Minnesota was only a territory.

"It's a 160-year-old brand," Holcomb says. "It's pre-Civil War. It's pre-landing on the moon. Throughout American history -- through World War II and all that -- Gluek Beer has been there. They were one of the first beers to be sold to the military. They were one of the first brands to ever have refrigeration. They were the first to ever patent a malt liquor in the United States."

Gottlieb Gluek, an immigrant from Allmersbach, Germany, founded the Mississippi Brewing Company in 1857 in northeast Minneapolis. It was the first production permit issued in Minnesota at the time, but Gluek wasn't the first to brew beer in Minnesota. Yoerg's, the first Minnesota-brewed beer, came on the market nine years prior, and Jacob Schmidt Brewing Company was founded two years prior to Mississippi Brewing. But along with those brands and Schell's, Gluek became an enduring emblem of drinking culture in Minnesota.

It became more than just a beer brand. It stood as an identifier for the Minnesotan people across the 27 states where it was sold.

In its time, the rebranded Gluek Brewing Company would survive the death of its founder, a devastating brewery fire, the temperance movement, and four ownership changes. Cost-cutting seemed like an unfitting end for the brand, so Holcomb picked up the lapsed brand and decided to give it a revival befitting its legacy.

"The brand was just dead; they said, 'Nobody cares about Gluek Beer,'" she says. "That's why it's kind of a modern day love story. Gluek Beer is finally in the hands of someone who cares."

The 2017 version of Gluek Beer (5.25% ABV, 32 IBU) is a totally different recipe than the previous iterations. Holcomb sourced her Munich malts and Saaz hops through Bev-Source and worked very closely with a team of cicerones and a brewing chemist to get a recipe that has a deep appreciation for old-world German customs while still tasting relevant to the drinkers of 2017.

The result is a pale pilsner that has none of the markings of its budget kin. While the body is light, clear, and easy to drink, it maintains a sturdy bitterness and a healthy effervescence. It doesn't smell like your dad's old fishing cooler -- it's fresh and colorful without the tinny Schlitz corn flavor that eventually drove the brand into the ground. The cans represent the beer's legacy -- they were even designed by a former Gluek label designer, Tom Jahnke -- but their tall-boy stature shows a consideration for contemporary drinking habits.

"My whole mission is to find the perfect balance," Holcomb says. "The yoga teacher in me wants to build relationships and nurture them. It's about sharing. That's my vision for the brand."
